Jim Delahanty is expected to rejoin the Nationals to-day.

Early last week the second baseman wrote saying that he had improved and would start for Washington last night. The player had not reported last night, but it is thought that he will be on hand this afternoon, although there is no likelihood of his being in the game to-day, as he will be given an opportunity to entirely recover before getting back into harness. Delahanty suffered at first from nervousness, and later showed symptoms of malaria.

Providing that Delahanty is in good condition when he gets here, the Nationals will be in better shape than they have been at any other time this season. The acquisition of Bob Unglaub filled a long-felt want, as the club is now well fortified in case of injuries, having two good utility men, in addition to the regulars. Freeman has shown such an improvement of late that Cantillon does not plan to displace the big fellow permanently, but will put Unglaub on the first bag when visiting teams use left-hand pitchers, who have been able to fool Freeman. In addition to being a clever fielder, Unglaub has the reputation of being a valuable hitter, and can be used to advantage to hit for the pitcher.

Barring the double-header last Monday, which was one of the poorest exhibitions of the year on the local grounds, the Nationals have done really good work since returning from the disastrous swing around the circuit. Out of seventeen games, the Nationals have won ten. After taking four out of five from the Highlanders, the Nationals dropped three to the White Sox and won one, the other contest being the sixteen-inning tie. The St. Louis Browns were stunned when they were beaten in three of the five games here, and so far the Nationals have taken two out of three from Cleveland, with one game to be played to-day. Hugh Jennings will bring his Detroit Tigers here to-morrow for a three-game series, and then the Nationals will go West, remaining on that side until August 11.

There is no more earnest player on the Washington club than Clyde Milan, but none of the local players are more unfortunate in receiving injuries than the youngster from Linden, Tenn. In Friday's game Milan hurt his side in sliding into second, and on Saturday dove into the same bag, and just to show there was no hard feeling, skinned the other side of his body. He was limping around yesterday like his shoes hurt, but will be back on the job this afternoon as usual.

Bill Burns and Jim Delahanty have received attractive offers to go to the Orient in the fall with an all-star ball club that will play in Japan, China, the Philippines, and the Hawaiian Islands.

The team will be composed of some of the star players of the United States. This will be one of the greatest trips that a baseball club has ever taken, in all covering a distance of about 20,000 miles. It will be the first time that an American club has ever visited the Orient, and it is expected that the trip will tend to increase the popularity of the great American game in those countries. In fact, the influence of this trip should make baseball the national sport in all these various countries.

At the present time baseball is very popular in the Orient. In Japan they have a four-team league, composed of the university clubs of that country. In Manila there is a five-team league, composed of United States troops and civilians. In Hawaii there is a four-team league, composed of athletic clubs. The class of baseball played by these teams is very high, but they will undoubtedly be much benefited by seeing these great players in action, and will be educated up to the finer points of the game.

When the series of games is played in Japan the people of Yokohama and Tokyo will be apt to break the world's record for attendance at a ball game. The Japanese are very progressive, and will realize at once what an advertisement this would be to them, and having the population of these two cities to draw from, there is no reason why the record should not be broken.

The club will sail under the management of M. A. Fisher, one of the best-known baseball managers on the Pacific Coast, and J. L. Woods, a sporting promoter. The personnel of the club will consist of such stars as Frank Chance, of the Chicago Nationals; Arval Overall, of the same club; Jiggs Donohue, of the Chicago Americans; Hal Chase, of the New York Americans; Ty Cobb, of Detroit; Pat Donohue, of the Boston Americans; Jack Bliss, of the St. Louis Nationals; George Hildebrand, William Devereux, and Rolfe Zeider, of the Pacific Coast League.

Present indications point to two new houses in the National League next season. The men who are to step out, according to midsummer report, are Jawn McCloskey and William J. Murray. McCloskey, one of the best centers of bush league phenomena in the business, will, it is said, retire by request from the management of the St. Louis Cardinals, while Murray will desert Philadelphia on his own initiative. Murray and Billy Shettsline, figurehead president of the Phillies, are warm friends, but the owners of the Quaker City aggregation are averse to spending any money on the team, and in these days of hot competition cash gets the players and a look-in on the championship. Like a wise Irishman, Murray has decided not to waste any more time in St. Louis, and may possibly get a job in the American League, though he is not seeking one. Ban Johnson has a high appreciation of Murray's capacity as a clever leader, and if there is any vacancy in the American League ranks Ban will try to place the former chief of the Skeeters. For McCloskey it seems to be a case of back to the bushes. Jawn J. can pick out the players, but when he gets them he cannot handle them. In this respect the St. Louis chief resembles Bill Armour, who laid the foundation for Detroit's wonderful combination. It took Jolly Jennings, diplomat extraordinary, to mold the snarling Tigers into a contented family and to stop the feudal strife between Tyrus Cobb and many of his mates.

Ty Cobb, who made his hundredth hit last Wednesday in Boston, got a warm call down while in the Hub from the Massachusetts scribes. Cobb's chestiness got on the nerves of the Boston pencil pushers, and to the Southern's roost Cobb was not reported last night, and long additions. Cobb undoubtedly poses in playing the game, but he has a right to pose, since his work this season has been wonderful. If it had not been for Tyrus the Trusty, the Tigers would be in the second division right now. Cobb kept fighting when things were breaking badly for the Michiganses, and put more than one game to their credit all by his lonesome. Like Mike Doolin, of the Giants, Cobb is a great advertiser for himself, but in view of their work this season neither player is to be blamed if occasionally he points with pride by his actions to his wonderful record. Chicagoans hate Doolin and Bostonians loathe Cobb. If Mike were with the Cubs and Cobb with the Red Sox, what a reversal of affection there would be!

It may be a case of sour grapes, but Barney Dreyfuss isn't a bit stuck on "Rube" Marquard, the Giants' $10,000 purchase from Indianapolis. Barney sees the season's sensation of the American Association. Marquard is not worth half or quarter the sum reputed to have been promised for him. According to the little Pittsburgh president, Marquard cannot field his position, and has a bad habit of handing out complimentary air-kisses apparently possessed by most left-handers. Barney may be right about Marquard's abilities, but in view of the Pirates' dallying with left-handers, there is no necessity for the Pittsburgh president to teach the Southern gentleman his opinions on Mr. Marquard. Barney had Jack Pfeiffer some years ago, but the Chicagoan wasn't good enough for him and was passed along to Omaha. Patsy Flaherty, of the Doves, too, was a Pirate, but the firm of Clarke and Dreyfuss thought the peppery one was of minor league caliber and turned him over to Boston as part payment for Eddie Abbot.

Marquard is not a left-hander in the National League last year, but not in this campaign, was released by Pittsburgh after only a brief try-out. In view of these circumstances, New Yorkers need not get much attention to B. D.'s slip regarding Marquard—New York Press. It will be recalled that Barney Dreyfuss let Bob Ganley and Otis Clymer, two of the best outfielders in the American League, come to Washington after deciding that they were worthless.

Boston Landlord Holds Diamond Trophy for Hotel Bill.

Boston, Mass., July 19.—It was discovered by Ty Cobb, of the Tigers, left town Wednesday night without the diamond trophy given him for leading the American League in batting last year. The Georgian objected to paying extra charges for having some meals served in his room, as Southern gentlemen are accustomed to at home. He also owed for an extra meal for an ardent admirer which was served in the dining-room, and for a cuspidor which he broke showing his friend how he made four hits in one inning.

The bill was not so large as to break Landlord Whipple if Cobb did not pay it, but, being a Yankee, the landlord thought to teach the Southern gentleman what they do in New England when people try to duck hotel bills. He retained Ty's big medal in the hotel safe, merely as a kind of hostage until Ty sees fit to settle. It was said that Cobb roundly shouldered to wear it, anyway.

Sox Pitcher Says Club Will Have to Sell or Trade Him.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 19.—Frank Smith, the pitcher, who recently left the Chicago White Sox, owing to a row with Owner Comiskey, declares emphatically he will not return to the Chicago club. The big twirler attended the game between the Pirates and Doves, and during a conversation said: "There is not a chance of my playing again with the White Sox. Comiskey will have to trade for me or sell me. The Chicago owner is showing a poor return for the manner in which I have served him by his attempt publicly to discredit me. His attitude is not adhering to club rules is totally untrue. I never took liquor, and as for dodging morning practice, well, you know I would sooner play ball than feed."

Smith declares he is on excellent terms with Fledler Jones.

Bentley May Jump Lynchburg.

Lynchburg, Va., July 19.—It is believed here generally that Bentley, the heavy hitting catcher of the local ball team, who was called home Friday by illness of his wife, will not report again to the team. It is thought that Bentley resents a severe row given him by local fans in Wednesday's game against Roanoke. If he decides to stay at his home in North Carolina, he will be suspended and his place filled at once.

Deal for Portsmouth Team Off.

Lynchburg, Va., July 19.—It is understood here that the deal for the purchase of the Portsmouth ball team and franchise by J. J. Grim, formerly owner of the local team, has not gone through because of the fact that Owner Bland desires the ball park to go with the franchise. Grim does not want to invest in Portsmouth realty and may decide to cast his lot elsewhere.

Shamokin Team Going Well.

Shamokin, July 19.—The excellent playing of the local Atlantic League team the past two weeks, under the able management of Capt. Lave Cross, has placed Shamokin in high favor, and now that a new schedule has been arranged and two new clubs added to the circuit, fans are confident the club will not wind up the season at the tail end.

St. Louis, July 19.—New York and St. Louis fought one of the most sensational battles of the season this afternoon, the Giants finally winning, 6 to 4, in sixteen innings.

This was the second longest game this season, and as a result the second game was not played. A double bill is now scheduled for Tuesday.

Not only was to-day's game exciting, as extra-inning contests usually are, but there was excitement also in the grand stand. Excitement on the diamond was furnished by the umpires losing control of the game for a good part of the time, the players doing pretty much as they pleased. In the grand stand, an individual looking for trouble tried to start a fight, and came pretty near doing it before the police arrived and escorted him away.

Karger twirled the entire game for St. Louis, and after a slow start in the first inning he twirled in grand form. But for an error, the contest would probably have gone even farther than it did.

Crandall started on the slab for New York, but he was in far from good shape, and was dropped out in the eighth to allow Needham to bat for him. Young Crandall took up the pitching at this point, and he did fine work while he was on duty. New York also gave him nice support.

Where the Giants tied the game up was in the ninth, when, with two gone, Bresnahan was presented with a double by Ruderman, and he scored on a single by Doolin. In the sixteenth, Byrne started New York off well by putting Brian on first by a bad throw. Then the latter came around on a sacrifice and, in his trip over Barry's head, the latter, in turn, scoring on a single by Bresnahan.

As Tenney had previously gone out on a grounder to Gilbert, there would have been three down before the triple came, had not Byrne made the break, his only one during the game.
